Rare bird

Camille Engel's backyard bird paintings sell almost as quickly as she finishes each one.

This accomplished artist doesn't have to go far to find subjects for her award-winning oil paintings. A young chickadee on an outside branch, a cluster of wildflowers, even one perfect red apple—all are examples of everyday splendor she captures on canvas.

Engel is known for her use of rich colors, textures, and intricate detail. Her paintings, in fact, have "a mastery of line, color, and value," says avid collector Harold Roe. "Her paintings are passionate and exquisitely rendered—I proudly own four Camille Engel originals, one of which is touring United States museums through 2011."

Engel's work has been accepted into prestigious museum tours and art exhibitions from Santa Fe to New York City.

"My paintings are very introspective views for me: it's realizing the beauty that surrounds us, sometimes even in the most unlovely things," says Engel.

What inspires Engel the most is not a singular cultural message, nor even the master painters she admires, but rather her core beliefs.

"For me," Engel explains, "every morning is a fresh opportunity to find extraordinary joy in the most ordinary things. My art overflows out of that joy." ●
